Compatibility View

Compatibility View helps make websites designed for older browsers look better when viewed in Internet Explorer. If you choose to view a website in Compatibility View, as a convenience to you, Internet Explorer will remember this choice and use Compatibility View the next time you visit the site. You can clear the list of websites you've chosen to display in Compatibility View by using the Delete Browsing History feature in Internet Explorer or the Compatibility View Settings dialog box.

For better website compatibility, you can turn on Compatibility View Updates. If you choose this option, Internet Explorer will periodically download an updated list of Compatibility View settings from Microsoft, and standard computer information will be sent. You can turn off Compatibility View Updates at any time.

To turn off Compatibility View Updates

1. While in Internet Explorer, press the Alt key, click Tools on the menu bar, and then click Compatibility View settings.
2. Clear the Include updated website lists from Microsoft check box.
